At Halso UK Fuels, we're dedicated to providing fuel solutions that align with the needs of modern businesses while prioritising environmental responsibility. That's why we're proud to offer Hydrotreated Vegetable Oil (HVO) – a sustainable alternative to traditional diesel that's as efficient as it is eco-friendly.

Hydrotreated Vegetable Oil, or HVO, is a renewable fuel made from 100% sustainable sources like waste vegetable oils and animal fats. This means it produces significantly lower carbon emissions, reduces environmental impact, and helps companies meet sustainability targets without compromising on performance.

WHY CHOOSE HVO?

Extended Engine Life

HVO is a cleaner fuel, which means less engine wear and fewer maintenance needs. Engines running on HVO experience less carbon build-up and fewer impurities, helping your equipment last longer and perform more efficiently.

Renewable & Sustainable

HVO is made from renewable, waste-derived materials, reducing reliance on fossil fuels and contributing to a circular economy. Using HVO supports waste reduction by repurposing materials that would otherwise go unused.

Engine Compatibility

One of the greatest advantages of HVO is that it's a drop-in fuel, meaning it can be used in most diesel engines without modifications. This easy transition allows businesses to make an immediate impact without added infrastructure or downtime.

Lower Emissions

Switching to HVO can cut CO2 emissions by up to 90% compared to diesel, with fewer nitrogen oxides and particulates. It's the cleaner choice for businesses committed to a sustainable future.
